Groovy BABY

It's time to dig out that lava lamp and dust off those flares – we're getting on down for summer as we take a trip back to the Seventies. The Disco-decade style still works today thanks to touches of white and subtle flashes of gold that tone down the historically eye-popping patterns. In fashion, House of Holland's spring/summer collection celebrated flower power with bright, oversized florals bringing some funk to the catwalk. Meanwhile, Emilio Pucci's models ranged from floaty hippies in tassels and tie-dye to more refined retro babes in tailored burnt oranges and browns. Groovy patterns and vintage materials have also made their way into interiors – Gubi's elegant TS table puts brown marble back on the map, while Missoni Home's Kandahar pouffe is a softer side of psychedelic. Far out... Totally.
