Food for Soul

A culinary nonprofit calls on some creative visionaries to help nourish the body and dazzle the eye

As a planet, we trash 1.3 billion tons of food a year while more than 800 million people remain hungry. Italian chef Massimo Bottura, of three-Michelin-star restaurant Osteria Francescana, and his wife, Lara Gilmore, are trying to change that—one meal at a time—with their innovative nonprofit Food for Soul. At community kitchens or refettorios throughout Italy (as well as in Paris, London, and Rio de Janeiro) chefs such as Alain Ducasse, Clare Smyth, Daniel Boulud, and Bottura himself work with locals to prepare meals for the hungry. What's more: The spaces have been designed by the likes of AD100 maestro Ilse Crawford, artist JR, and sculptor/painter Mimmo Paladino. "In a world in which so many build walls, we break walls," explains Bottura. "We say, Welcome, come in." Now, thanks to a grant from the Rockefeller Foundation, they're planning to bring the operation Stateside in the next year. foodforsoul.it
